The Singer

By JANKIS PARKER C. by Modure Newspaper Symbosite WAL Section.

THE dreary bypt fell on the crube furniture, on the cheep curpet and on the best shoulders of the man, while but staring, unseeing. The man cressed the room to a small battered desk and lifted out a faded photograph. A girl. in a ruffled frock smiled up at him from the picture.

He had taken it himself. The day had been warm and they had gone picnicking beside a spariting brook. He remembered it, clearly, vividiy, How sweet she had been, how lovely? And how he had wanted her. Ineffable for had overwhelmed him when she had said yes. Angrily, he thrust the photograph back into its hiding place.

Suddenly he swerved, all alert. There had been a grating sound. It came again, a definite acraping in the lock. The tin door, painted to look like mahogany, swung open. A woman stood there, pathetic in a little black satin hat with its attempt at smartness. "So you're back." The man's voice clipped the air. The wilted flower in her lapel drooped. "I didn't know where else to go. . . ." Her large eyes fell before his riveted stare. She toyed with the tarnished chain on her bag. Then she turned to leave but his toneless voice summoned her back.

"Were you turned out or did be leave you?"

She bit her lip. "Neither. He said things, so I left. My self-respect. Seeing his ieer she advanced a determined step. "I do have self-

"After what you've done?" he flared. "Oh, you don't understand:" she moaned.

Her small hands were tense. Her woebegone face mirrored deep despair. Before her constructed mental vision 1 the two men whom she had known i only to bring her unhappiness, bobbed up and down like malicious puppets. She saw herself, timid. diffident, shrinking, between them. First, the one who was to become her husband. But life with the model man had day by day become more trying. He proved firm as a rock, and as unre-

Then-and she laughed pitifully at herself-the villain had swung onto the stage. She mused that he had indeed been villainous not to have at least looked it. Her husband, she reflected bitterly, though she did not condemn him, had been more villainous. Consumed with fear and jealousy when he had sensed the probable loss of his dainty little wife, he had borne down on her menacingly, actually driving her into the other's outstretched arms.

Now the woman smiled at her own expense. The love of her laughing suitor had fied, and so had she, back to the X-ray eyes of her husband. Nervously she tucked a golden strand of hair under the shapeless

"You will try to understand, won't you?" she pleaded. The muscles in his lean cheeks twitched. She continued droningly. "He was gentle, kind, while you . . . oh, why were you so hard? We weren't poor, yet look at our home! And the time I bought the silk stockings. You seemed to think beauty was wrong, that even comfort was sinful."

His voice vibrated under the low ceiling. The things you bought were made you more beautiful, as though you weren't beautiful enough!" H2 checked himself; his face colored.

Then he continued bitterly. "He must have lost his gentleness or you'd still be with him." This thought made his voice strident. "You'd be with him yet if he hadn't changed, wouldn't

She made no reply. Jealousy smote him that only necessity had brought her back. "So he had to force you out!" he jeered.

She pulled the purse handle tant. "I told you he didn't force me out! I could have stayed. I'd never have gone with him at all if you hadn't been so hard."

She saw her husband's livid face, and added: "I'm not blaming you for whatever I've done, but if you'd been different I wouldn't have been won over by a soft mannered man."

He stared at her grimly through a tense silence. "What do you want me to do?" she asked dully. "Stay or leave?" A swirl of memories raced before him. His father-stern, harsh, unyielding. His father's gloomy house. It occurred to him that it had never been called his mother's house, too. His run-away thoughts flew to the picture in the desk drawer. He wondered how she'd gotten all those ruffies on her dress. Then he pulled himself up violently. Had she not left him for another?—a man who lived an evil life gayly?

He looked up to depounce her flercely, but she was gone. The realization was like a sharp pain. Frightened, he raced into the dingy hall, and down the rickety staircase, but the small frame building and the streets were descried. Full of misery he dragged up the stairs.

The door of her room was ajar. He looked at it with lasterless eyes before he pashed it open. Then he saw her.

She lay on her from cot in a deep exhausted sleep. The tenseness drained from his face. His eyes re-Sected deep, grateful joy. Quietly, gently, he spread a blanket over her. Then he put the wilted flower in a glass of water.

Michigan Waterfall Is Somewhat Like Niagara

Michigan has the largest waterfall between Niagara and the Rocky mountains. Tabquamenon falls are in Luce county-named for a Detroit man-in the upper peninsula of Michigan. about 60 miles from St. Ignace and the Straits of Mackings

Many old legends cluster around falls and river, says a writer in the Detroit Free Press. The Tahquamenon is mentioned frequently in Longfellow's "Hiawatha." The indian hero and his friend Kwasind cleared the river of its sunken logs and sandbars. Somewhere in the river bed, on the way to the falls, Kwasind lies burled after his fight with the otters.

The river acquired an added interest through the legend that Paul Bunyan was born about ten nilles above the falls. Paul is the methical hero of every northern Michigan lumber-

The great falls are between 200 and 300 feet wide and nearly 50 feet high, with a heavy volume of water.

Like Niagara, the water cascades over a ledge beneath which there is a cavelike formation into which one may clamber behind the falls.

Garden of Eden The origin of the various races of the world is a matter of mere speculation. Textbooks of ethnology mention different theories of the formation of races as the result of climatic and geographic conditions. The negro race evidently developed in Africa, negroes being mentioned in Egyptian manuscripts as early as 2000 B. C. The most usual explanation of the location of the Garden of Eden is that it was in the modern Irak in Asia, between the civers Euphrates and Tigris, somewhere near the city of Babylon. The Britannica article on the subject says that the attempt to locate a mythological garden is bound to be attended by considerable difficulty, and all that can be safely said

"Messenger From Allah"

Between 1809 and 1900 in British iomalifand, a fanatic called "The Mad Mullah" carried on a one man war with Great Britain. Fibaily, one day, when he was in the desert with relatives and counselors, an airplane appeared in the sky. Never having seen one before, he told his party it was a messenger from Allah. The "messenger" dropped his message-a bomband killed nearly all of them. The Mullah escaped—but learned his lesson.-Collier's Weekly.

The Lia Fail

The Lin Fail, or Stone of Destiny, is the name of the famous Stone of Scone, seated on which the ancient Scottish kings were crowned. According to tradition, it formerly was the pillow used by the patriarch Jacob, and possibly was brought to Scotland after the Crusades. It was kept in the Abbey church of Scone and in 1296 was removed by Edward I to England and is at present under the coronation chair in Westminster Abbey.

Cave of Skulls on Island

Mackinae island has a cave of skulls, discovered by Alexander Henry who miraculously escaped the massacre by Pontiac's savages. The purpose of the cave and the reason for its pile of skulls are mystery.

Early English Furniture

During the reign of Queen Elizabeth (1558-1603) the furniture of England not only showed strong influence of the Gothic period, but took on a distinct individuality that makes it outstanding and one of the easiest types to identify, writes Edith B. Crumb in the Detroit News. During this period the furniture was of oak and showed architectural characteristics. The best example of this is the bed, the largest piece. Sometimes built to hold six or more persons, it appeared to be a permanent part of the room, for it had a high headboard, paneled and carved like the walls and supported by a cornice, and even had a coffered roof, this extending beyond the foot of the bed and supported by detached pillars, which rested on the floor. These usually showed the melon-bulb or exaggerated form of the urn. The general effect was one of massiveness; which, of course, was in keeping with the general scheme of the room.

SCATTERING INDUSTRY.

It is natural that industries should be connected with cities. In the past they have usually been located in or near cities, or else cities have grown up around them. Industrial cities, too have tended to cluster together. Thus Industrial sections develop like the Ruhr in Germany. and like the American region stretching from Illinois eastward to ithe sea, with the greatest concentration from Detroit to Pittsburgh.

President Roosevelt, who thinks ighis clustering of factories, mills and | furnaces is not necessary, or even wholesome, is said to be preparing plans for decentralizing industry by transfer from congested areas to the country. Thus workers would have pleasanter shops and homes and more healthful living, with a chance for gardening or "subsistence farming."

Here is something that Mr. Roosevelt and Henry Ford might get together on. Ford has been preaching and practicing the idea for years, Such a development could be accomplished more easily today than ever before, because of more flexible transportation. Difficulties, though, are sure to arise. Many workers rand their families will not want to leave the city. Local business groups are sure to object to losing industries. The easiest way to accomplish the change would be gradnally to set up new industries in the country.

BONE CONDUCTION.

Business men get all kinds of letsters, and sometimes it takes considerable ingenuity to figure out their meaning. Here is a good example for epistolary puzzle fans to work on. It was received the other day by a middle-western manufacturer who makes a device to help the deaf.

TT'S no use. He simply can't do any better. His grandfather was just like that."

But we can't let him go on this way. He will get into trouble and if he doesn't, there is his school work, and his career. We have to do something. We can't just stop and let him drift."

What can you do? He won't listen. He refuses to go to school. He wants to go to work. He won't get up in the morning and he won't do anything that is good for him. I tell you he is just like his grandfather. He was a family nuisance the longest day be

That is all very well but in every child there are other elements of inheritance than those of this grandfather. And I am not sure but that even those elements can be trained to behave if one tries hard enough.

Why won't this boy go to school. This is why. He is seventeen. He is six feet four, and heavy. He could lift a horse and all the work that school offers him is a five hour session of sitting and listening, sitting and writing, sitting and getting an ache in every muscle of his pulsing body. He wants to build things, to search, to experiment but the school forces him to sit still and accept what the teacher offers him. It is impossible. Hence the retreat to long hours in bed, to the streets and the open road.

Youth is eager for action. Maturity is not so much a matter of birthdays as it is of personal experience and equipment. Many of the adolescent boys and girls that are troubling their parents in this fashion need work and of course there is no work in the world to give them. We must offer them interesting and satisfying work within the schools where we have ordained they shall stay. It is cruel to make a young man or woman sit in stillness days on end in the name of education. We are wasting the nation's greatest asset, its new blood. We are sitting on a volcano that is one day to explode and work havor among us.

It is futile to denounce boys and girls for shiftlessness and idleness and loading and the rest of the charges we bring against them when we have so little faith in them as we indicate by our management of them. If we believe, as we say we do, that in them is the future of a great people, we must live to the faith. That means we must provide the ways and the means for this splendid army of young people to use their energy, their gifts and their powers.

Schools, more schools, different schools, are needed. Schools that are training schools for the future. As we have but vague ideas about his future the curriculum cannot be fastened down. It must be as fluid as the scheme that sets it. It must go along with the young people so that they can get out of it what they must have to fit themselves for the struggle to come.

If we have not this faith in our youth then we eaght to have the good sense to protect ourselves, our hopes and plane, our traditions and ideals by offering them education that educates, and doing it now. To-morrow will be too late. They will be voting next presidential election. They will be in the halls of Congress by the next. Take care of them now for their precious sakes and our own.

"We're in a very solemn time, Tony. I spent a lot of to day doing a queer thing-for me. I got to reading the Book of Daniel again -especially Belshazzar's feast"

"Daniel, you may remember, interpreted the writing on the wall. 'Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin, God hath numbered thy kindom and finished it. Thou art weighed in the balance and art found waiting. And in that night was Belshazzar, the King of the Chaldeans, slain!

"It is something very like that which is happening to us now, Tony; only the Finger, instead of writing again on the wall, this time has taken to writing in the skyover our heads. The Finger of God, Torg, has traced two little 7 streaks in the sky-two objects moving toward us, where nothing ought to move; and the message of one of them is perfectly plain.

"Thou art weighed in the balances and found wanting," that one says to us on this world. God has numbered thy kingdom and finished it.' But what does the other streak say?

"That is the strange one, Tonythat is the afterthought of Godthe chance He is sending us!

Island of St. Helena Is

Reduced in Population The island of St. Helena is located 1,200 miles from the west coast of Africa, and contains an area of about 47 square miles. It was discovered in 1501 by Juan de Nova Castella, a Portuguese navigator, who gave it its name because he first saw it on the day consecrated to St. Heiena. In the following century the Dutch took possession and retained it until 1673 when It was seized by England, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

When Napoleon was first banished to the island and held there as a po litical prisoner under British surveil Friends were sorry to learn of the iance, the population was about 800. the soldiers numbering 200 and the slaves about 300. Subsequently, the population increased-until it exceeded 6.000. Emigration has since reduced

> One of the factors which lessened the importance of the island was the opening of the Suez canal, and the consequent rerouting of the Indian trade. It has still a great value, however, as a naval station, and is one of the strong keys to English power in the south Atlantic.

FULL-QUART

BOTTLE FOR 20°

THE name "CLICQUOT CLUB," since 1881, has been the buy-word to a ginger ale of unsurpassable flavor and quality. Now it is also the "open sesame" to a new and unequaled standard of value. For it stands for honest-measure full-quart bottles

... from which you can pour, with justifiable pride, 6 to 9 long, iced drinks. In it you get the pick of Jamaica's ginger . . . aged with other selected ingredients . . . then blended with pure water from deep rock sources. A sip of CLICQUOT CLUB Pale Dry will convince you that here is a really dry ginger ale . . . a keen, appetizing drink.

If you have a nose for bargains (and a taste for quality) stop in at your dealer's today ... and treat yourself to a ginger ale whose flavor and value cars be copied, but never successfully. . . . Clicquot Club Company, Millis, Massachusetts.

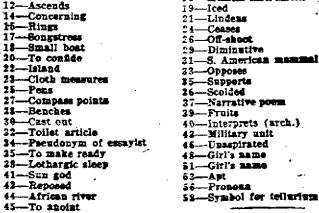

Circovor Cius comes in a juu bottles. A full quart is 32 ounces, a full pint 16 ounces. All ginger-ale makers must print net bottle-contents on the label. So look at the label before you buy . . . and be sure you get your money's worth! FULL QUARTS • FULL PURTS

COAST TO COAST ON $33.06 WITH MOBILGAS AND MOBILOIL

A. A. A. CONTEST BOARD TEST RUN* AVERAGES 21 MILES PER GALLON

gas and oil only $33.06! That's the remarkable new coast-to-coast record with Mobilgas and Mobiloil.

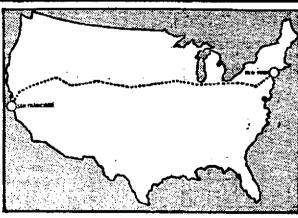

"My hat's off to Mobilgas and Mobiloii," Harry Hartz, who piloted the car, said. "They function perfectly under all conditions."

THROUGH ALL SORTS OF WEATHER. the Airflow spanned the continent, averaging 21.4 miles per gallon of Mobilgas. Mobilgas functioned perfectly through all weathers, in all altitudes up to 7,000 feet without carbureter adjustment.

*All performance claims herewith made are based on Certificate of Performance issued by the Contest Board of the A.A.A., souction number 3068.

HERE'S THE START of the recordbreaking coast-to-coast run to prove how economical it is to cross America in a modern car using a modern motor fuel. All the way across the country the Airflow stopped only at Mobilgas stations. Mobilgas and Mobiloil were used exclusively.

The gas tank was kept under lock and key. Lee Oldfield, A.A.A. Contest Board representative, kept official check of every ounce of gas used on the trip. The picture shows Oldfield locking the gas tank, and the Airflow all ready to start on its thrilling cross-continent economy trip:

Here's the car's route over mountains and plains under ever-changing atmospheric conditions from New York to San Fran-cisco. The trip was made under supervision of A.A.A. Contest Board.

STUDY MARINE LIFE ON OCEAN'S BOTTOM

Washington.-Dr. William Beebe noted oceanographic explorer, will pay wheat and hogs assuming the leader- the New York Zielerical weiety. Us-tion and semitropical climate, the Bermuda group is a veritable museum of rally. News regarding them was all forms of featinating marine life," says a National Geographic society bulletin.

"Ebb tide leaves on Bermuda's nink coral beaches somy starfish, fridescent jellyfish, glistening sea bottles, and thousands of beautiful seashelfs. In mudals accentum, one of the finess institutions of its kind in the world, more than 150 different varieties of

Looking down through the glass and crystal clear water, corals on the sandy bottom 40 feet below appear deceptively at arm's length. Many varieties of coral grow on the sand itself among bloated sea puddings and bright orange sponges, while others cling to rocky ledges decorated with swaring weeds. confectionery, and huge polyp mushrooms, a yard in diameter, grow beside bulbous masses of brown and yellow coral. Lavender sea fans of delicate lacework sway below immense coral antiers. Big. parti-colored parrotfish browse on algae-covered coral, gnawing it off with their tough beaks. The familiar red coral, associated with beads and jewelery, is not seen, being a sort of veining inside other coral.

"For the adventurous, Bermuda offers a still more exciting way of observing marine life. Putting on a copper helmet with attached air hose, and climbing down a swaying ladder into sapphire waves, the diver finds himself in a mysterious, amazing world.

"Oblique rays of sunlight filtering through blue water make an axure twilight through which one can see only about 50 feet. Blurred shapes drift nearer and evolve into incredibly lovely blue and gold angel fish, fins trailing in long streamers. These fish seem to have become symbolic of Bermuda. Angel fish designs are found in Bermudian jewelry and chinaware.

"Undersea, as if blown by an aquatic wind, everything constantly sways in one direction, pauses, and then returns. The diver who holds himself rigid, resisting this surge, seems alien to the fish and frightens them away. If he yields to the swell and is wafted back and forth, the fish accept him and may nibble him curiously.

"Before the glycerin-coated windows of his belimet drift devilfish, flapping like birds, swift schools of 'streamlined' mackerel, and occasionally a shark, whose reputation as a maneater some scientists think is unde-

Swarming for Balt.

"Jostling each other to get the bait offered them, fish swarm like bees around a diver. Bony-shelled trunkfish, noisy yellow grunts and striped ribbonfish, streak past. Silvery yellow jacks and thousands of small silversides flash in the sunlight. Fantastic fish resembling small dragons, weave in and out among attenuated needlefish. The cornetfish, with its trumpet-shaped mouth, arrives, swimming as easily backward as forward.

"To watch a submerged coral reef is to witness miracles. At one moment the whole reef is alive with pulsating, expanding, waving sea creatures of delicate pastel colors. A touch, s splash, or even the shadow from a boat overhead causes a spasm of alarm. In a twinkling every living thing on the reef has changed. Frail anemones contract and withdraw into themselves. Jeweled fish dark into holes. The banded rockfish has changed its markings and the spotted flounder that rippled over the sand is now invisible, having changed color to resemble sand. For a minute the reef remains barren and dull. Then, one by one, fish and anemones take cour age and furtively emerge.

"The reason for these lightning changes is obvious when one realises the greedy cannibalism of a coral rest. Though resembling the most retiring sensitive flowers, anemones use their tentacies to seize and paralyze fish.

"Light decreases and pressure increases, the desper one descends into the sea. Doctor Beebe, sealed into his two-ton diving ball or bathysphere descending past these surface fish, which are predominantly blue, will enter a twilight sone, where the fish are largely transparent, and finally come to rest in a some of laky blackbess half a mile below the surface. Here the water is extremely cold, practically without motion, and of such tremendous pressure that fish from this death often burst when brought to the sur-

Sound Made by Alligators

The alligator is unique among reptiles in making a loud noise or beliow. This cry varies greatly in cadence from a sound like the gentle mooing of a cow, made by small alligators only five feet in length, to the thundering and tremulous blast of big males of ten feet or more.

They passed on their rather crude craftspassion of the empire, and it was from Rome that the Venetians learned the trade. Venice, however, lifted glass making into the realm of the arts and has pever to this day been surpassed in the craft. So jealously did she guard the secrets of the exquisite. roseate-hued bubbles that for cepturies no glass blower was allowed to leave. the country and beace the other Eurepean nations could not learn her formulae. Venetian craftsmen were held virtual prisoners on the Island of Murano.

But about the middle of the Sixteenth century the ban was raised and they were allowed to travel in England, Spain, France, and Flanders. Their fame had preceded them, and everywhere they were halled with enthuslasm. Some of the glassmakers joined factories in the places they visited, while others started concerns of their own.

Dominion of Canada So

Named to Please U. S. In the first drafts of the British North America act the title of the new confederation was "Kingdom of Canada" and this was the proposal of Sir John Macdonald and other Canadian leaders. This name was opposed by the British foreign secretary, Lord Stanley, as being likely to offend the susceptibilities of the United States. according to a writer in the Detroit News, Finally the name "Dominion" was suggested to a conference of delegates, the inspiration having come from a verse in the Bible (Psalm 72, verse 9 or Zechariah 9, verse 10).

Authorities differ on the origin of the name "Canada," Charlevoix explained that an Iroquois word "kanata" meant "collection of buts" and was mistaken by early explorers for the name of the country. Father Hennepin said that the Spanlards on landing were disappointed with the country and expressed their feelings by calling it "Il capa di pada," meaning "Cape Nothing." A similar story is told with regard to the Portuguese who explored the St. Lawrence, Another Indian derivation is from "Kan" for mouth and "ada" for river, eriginally the country at the mouth of the St. Lawrence.

Soldiers Engraved Names

on Virginia Cave Walls Thousands of both Federal and Confederate troops entered the underground labyrinths, better known as the Virginia Caverns, near Laces Spring, during the Civil war, and hundreds of them carved their names in stone deep beneath the Shenandoah valley, says a writer in the New York World-Telegram. Quite a few visitors, with the ald of recently complied lists of these soldiers' names, are finding the names of their fathers, grandfathers or other relatives who fought for the Union or for the Confederacy, For three-quarters of a mile underground the names are found, some no larger than a men's normal signature. others cut in letters several feet tall. In some places the signatures are so numerous that Federal and Confederate names are intermingled. The dates show the Confederates (mostly Stonewall Jackson's men) entered Virginia Caverns after the Federals-and some of the Federal names have been scratched across by Confederate bayonets.

Although these names were cut in the underground stone, many years ago, yet, forever protected as they are from sun and wind and rain, pearly all of them are apparently as distinct as when they were carved. Virginia Caverns are the oldest known caves in the Shenandonh valley, having been used by ploneer settlers as a hiding place from Indians during the French and Indian wars in 1754. The soldiers explored the caverns and carred their names by the light of pine torches, candles and lanterns, and native Virginians who explored the caves after the Civil war had the same crude sources of light
